Oppenheimer - Don't miss this theatre experience.

Written By : Prasannaraju Kottekat

One of the most spectacular visual treats. That is how I wish to explain the new Christopher Nolan movie. From the very first shot you get involved in the narrative that takes you to a time travel to the 1940s. The film is about the brain behind and the making of the first Atom Bomb that devastated Hiroshima and Nagasaki ending the 2nd World War.

How the movie takes you to the emotional and ethical conflicts the characters go through during the whole process is beyond words.

It is Scientific, Political, Philosophical, Spiritual and Emotional all put together.

The movie shows how the brain and energy of a genius scientist is diverted to the political gains of leaders and to control the world, once again proving that ultimately there is no winner in a war.

I couldn't make out any CGI shots in the movie. Excellent photography and sound design makes you feel the horror without a single visual of the holocaust. The film shows how to generate chill with silence. Nolan is well supported by the cast mainly Cillian Murphy, Robert Downey Jr, Mat Damon and all.

There is a quote from Gita too from which Oppenheimer takes motivation from. "Now, I am become Death, the destroyer of worlds..."

Post bombing developments also reminds what MT tells in "Perumthachan". Once the idol becomes a deity through the tantrik process, it is beyond the access of the sculptor." Nolan shows he is a master in biopics also even as continuing with his favorite non linear narrative.

Watch the movie in the best sound and visual quality theater. It is dialogue oriented so I would suggest preferably with subtitles.

Enjoy the movie. Don't wait till they announce the next Oscars.
